Record Description

Population schedules consist of large sheets with rows and columns. The schedules are arranged by state, county, place, and enumeration district. The districts are not always filed in sequential order. The arrangement of families on a schedule is usually in the order in which the enumerator visited the households.

Record Content

The 1930 census includes the following genealogical information:

- Full name
- Race
- Age (can be used to calculate an approximate birth year)
- Relationship to the head of household (active military personnel in naval yards, army posts, etc. may use the term "Sailor" or list military rank rather than actual relationship to head of household)
- Birthplace of the individual and the parents (included even if the parents were not members of the household)
- Marital status (single, married, widowed, or divorced)
- Year immigrated to the United States
- Whether a naturalized citizen
- Occupation
- Native language if foreign-born and whether can speak English
- Whether a military veteran
- Street address and house number

How to Use the Record

Begin your search by finding your ancestors in the census index. Use the locator information in the index (such as page number or family number) to locate your ancestors in the census. Compare the information in the census to what you already know about your ancestors to determine if this is the correct family or person. You may need to compare the information of more than one family or person to make this determination. Be aware that as with any index, transcription errors may occur.

FAQ'S

100 Years of Record Gathering and Preservation

FamilySearch, historically known as the Genealogical Society of Utah, is dedicated to preserving the records of the family of mankind. Our purpose is simple—help people connect with their ancestors through easy access to historical records. We gladly join with others who share this vision.

For over 100 years, we have served record custodians around the world. We pioneered industry standards for gathering, imaging, indexing, and preserving records. Advances in technology and the emergence of our digital world now provide an opportunity for us to combine the resources of GSU and FamilySearch.org under a single name: FamilySearch.

FamilySearch works together with records custodians to help them provide timely, economic, secure, and broad access to records while maintaining access control and identity.

More Access to More Records for More People

The FamilySearch Records Access program is designed to significantly increase the number of genealogical records available to people around the world. Through the program, FamilySearch teams up with records custodians and other organizations to gather, preserve, digitize, index, and post the records online. The records can then be shared via the Internet for convenient public access.

FamilySearch Indexing

Index records to make them searchable online.

Your gift of time allows you and thousands of others like you to join hands in making worldwide historical records searchable, available for anyone on the internet. The records you index will be seen on the internet in only a few digital formats at no cost. You simply download and transcribe digital records to make it easy to use online.

It's fast, it's easy and you can do it from the comfort of your own home. FamilySearch indexing is a great way to make available records that may not have seen the light of day for more than 100 years. Isn't it about time we work together to do something about that?

Financial Donation

Provide resources that fund access to records and resources.

Your gift of money moves family history forward. There are many ways to make a gift to FamilySearch. As a nonprofit organization, FamilySearch is completely funded by the generous donations of individuals and organizations who want to further our common goals of preservation, living family members with those who have gone before them.

You can donate cash or any number of other assets. You may want to make a gift now, or you may consider planning a gift for the future.
